About This Game

Choose one of the three factions:

- The Imperial Circus
- T.A.B.L.E.
- Seeker Association

and embark on an adventure to become a true Beyond Baron in the colorful and tongue-in-cheek world of Circus Empire!
Siege is a strategic single-player card game about sieging castles with armies and magic.

In Siege:

- There are over 300 different building, spell and creature cards;
- Explore the solo campaign with over 100 battles;
- Build your own army deck or multiple decks;
- Upgrade your cards so they become more powerful;

- Campaign dialogue choices can impact battles and loot;
  - Earn extra gold and cosmic shards through procedurally generated special missions.

How does this game differ from other card games?

Siege is mainly a single player experience with crafted campaign, where you have to tactically fight against different tower, shrine and wall card combinations.

Also mana channels are gained by sacrificing cards and you can earn extra channels by sacrificing more cards in the same turn, thus making strategic decisions between card advantage and tempo.

Well me - at first I thought that it will be just about as boring as it was in very early stages when the game started out as a social networks game with card deck and even more tier multiplayer. I was so wrong!

- + Solo campaign with nice and sometimes funny (I actually chuckled when saw card called Power Potato) storytelling
- + Smooth gaming experience. Doesn't require much of learning (can figure out most if not all by trial-and-error)
- + Card upgrades and other small, but neat extras

- Visually game still looks like a social network's flash game or mobile port
- Design sometimes seem inconsistent (some characters look like drawn drunk, progress map heavily reminds of Kingdom Rush's) and plain boring. Templates?
- Somewhat hard to tell what card exactly will do (probably subjective - not a fan of this type of games), therefore unintentional ups are almost guaranteed
- Lack of sounds, voiced dialogues and quality music

Obviously the game tries to cut some share from Hearthstone's success and at some point it does that very well (campaign, upgrades).. I really wanted to like this game but early on, long before you even get to the chapter that allows upgrading cards, you're pitted against impossible situations that earlier level cards can't defeat. There are bonus items you can win via quests but they are so feeble they don't do much good.

Secondly there are some pretty huge glitches like cards that are unusable because they freeze the game and some instances where the game stops you from placing cards for no reason

Check my game time - I really tried to grunt past it all using elbow grease but in the end Siege is a poorly tested game both challenge-wise and code-wise.. Fun and challenging.. THIS GAME IS NOTHING like the trailers. got some spare money? looking for a good strategy game or something? don't chose this, art is clunky at best, bad translations, horrible gameplay mechanics (just spam 2 win) it really just sucks at everything it tries to acheive, writing this to stop anyone else fall into the same pit fall is me. Go buy anything please, waste of $34.. I really enjoyed the game. Recommended for fans of CCGs.
